YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

"Tell Him You're Sick of Him"

Dear Ann Landers: I've been going with this man for six years. He mentioned marriage after five martinis back in 1957. When I said "yes" he sobered up fast and gave me several reasons why we'd have to wait. He hasn't brought up the subject since.

I am almost 28, and he is 30. I know he has money saved and his home paid for. He also bought a new car last year. About twice a week Howard takes out a hard-looking, dish-water blonde who works in the same office. He says she keeps him posted on business gossip and there's no romance there. I've caught him in several lies and I'm getting fed up on his sponging Sunday dinner off me. He says he loves my cooking.

I've refused several nice fellows who have asked me out because I believe in being true to Howard. My friends say I'm a fool and I'm beginning to think they're right. What shall I tell him?—VY

Dear VY: Tell him you can't go out with him anymore because of illness — you're sick of him.

Dear Ann: My husband was going with this girl before we met and married. She wasn't the right kind of a person and the baby they had is now almost five years old. My husband (being a perfect gentleman) didn't try to back out. The court ordered him to pay child support.

We have no children of our own and it burns me up that he has to send this woman money every month. How long does a man have to pay for a mistake that is only half his? What would happen if he just stopped sending the support checks? Please reply in the paper. I don't want any Ann Landers envelopes coming to the house. — E.A.

Dear E.A.: Child support means financial aid until the child is of age. In most states "of age" means 21.

Your husband will probably pay for "his half of the mistake" for another 16 years. If he doesn't send the support checks he'll probably hear from a lawyer. It could mean jail.

P.S. There are no Ann Landers envelopes. All mail sent from my office arrives in a plain white envelope with no return address.

Dear Ann: My mother is the world's worst driver and I'm
